Examples of BTh fees payable per academic year

Depending on the chosen pace of study the following examples illustrate typical yearly fees (but note yearly fee increases, as detailed overleaf). These examples exclude the one-off registration fee payable at the start of the BTh programme.

Full-time, over three years: 4,230 GBP per year (120 credits per year)*

Part-time, over four years: 3,173 GBP per year (90 credits per year)

Part-time, over five years: 2,538 GBP per year (average 72 credits per year)

Part-time, over six years: 2,115 GBP per year (60 credits per year, or half-time)

* Note that at The BTh cannot be taken full-time at King's. This figure is included here for comparison with full-time fees at other institutions.

These illustrations assume a September start. As King's accepts students throughout the year, initially new students pay for individual modules as needed until the following September. Graduate Diploma fees are 2,115 GBP per year over two years, 1,410 GBP over three years, and 1,058 GBP over four years.

NOTES

Fee Increases

Normally King's fees increase yearly (typically between 1-4%) to take into account inflation and other factors. Validation fees are set by the university and can change in the future. The yearly fee illustrations overleaf are based on the 2019-20 fees.

Overall Costs and Time Limits

The BTh degree consists of 360 credits. The full-time illustration overleaf provides a general idea of the overall cost of the degree (but note above the yearly fee increases). The Graduate Diploma is a total of 120 credits. Each year students choose how many credits to register (min 40 credits per year, max 180 credits). The BTh must be completed between four and six years (a seventh year is permissible in extenuating circumstances).

Other Fees

The APCL/APEL fee is only due when applying for exemptions for previous studies. Re-examination fees are paid if a failed module is re-taken. Deferral fees only become payable if a student defers modules beyond an assignment deadline. The school runs optional seminars and conferences which attract additional fees not covered overleaf. However, students are not required to attend any conferences or seminars as part of their studies.

Fees include access to various reading resources and there is no prescribed list of textbooks to buy. Nonetheless students should still expect to budget for some books during their course.

Instalments and Discounts

New students commencing part-way through an academic year pay for individual modules as needed. Thereafter, yearly fees are calculated and are due by 20 September. The total payable is based on the number of modules registered for that academic year. Fees settled in full by this date secure a 2.5% discount.

Fees may also be paid over three instalments, with a first payment due 20 September, followed by two equal payments on 10 January and 10 April. There is also the option to pay monthly, with the first payment due on 20 September, followed by six equal monthly instalments due 20 October – 20 March. In both cases the first payment is typically 40% (or 50% for full-time MA students). This is because the school is required to collect university validation fees at the beginning of the academic year.

Methods of Payment

Our preferred method of payment is by direct bank transfer. Fees can also be paid by credit/debit card and cheque. All fees paid are strictly non-refundable, regardless of reason. This is because of the school's financial commitments to third parties and service providers for every student. Therefore, only pay fees if absolutely certain of completing your studies

Overseas students

Most UK institutions charge higher fees for non-EU students. However, King's fees are the same for both UK and overseas students.

Student Loans and Scholarships

King's does not come under the Student Loan Company or Student Finance England. We currently cannot offer bursaries or scholarships. However, we can provide a letter confirming your student status if required, for example if required by a sponsor.
